Dear Meta Directors:

I write as Trustee of the New York State Common Retirement Fund, one of the nation's largest pension funds, with an estimated $279.7 billion in assets as of December 31, 2021. The Fund holds and invests the assets of the New York State and Local Retirement System on behalf of more than one million members and beneficiaries, and as of March 31, 2022, held approximately $1.1 billion in Meta Platforms, Inc., shares.

As an investor in Meta, I write to express my deep and abiding concerns regarding the company's content management practices and how they relate to the tragic racially motivated mass shooting in Buffalo, New York, that claimed the lives of ten people. It has been widely reported that Meta has repeatedly failed to remove video clips and screenshots of the shooter's livestream and his alleged manifesto from its platforms. This is just the latest example of Meta's failure to enforce its community standards and guidelines to control the dissemination of hate speech and content that incites violence.

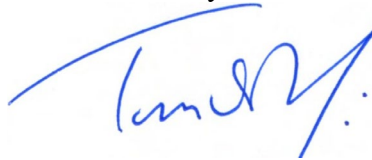

Businesses like Meta have a duty to ensure that their platforms remain a welcoming place for the widest range of customers and advertisers. While free expression is a fundamental value shared by all Americans and provides important protections for Americans' rights to speak their minds, Meta's future success is endangered by its repeated failure to adhere to its policies and its association with those who incite violence and spew hate speech through the company's platforms. Indeed, public reports have documented how Meta continues to allow white supremacists and other extremists to spread hate speech, misinformation, and incitement to violence on its platforms. Allowing this content on social media platforms facilitates the radicalization of individuals through repeated exposure to violent rhetoric, hate speech, and examples of previous violence. This radicalization has attracted unending scrutiny from regulators around the world and public denunciations that have led to increasing calls for further regulation of social media platforms.

The Fund has long been concerned with Meta's content management practices, and how Meta's board oversees these practices; and the Fund has sought to engage the company on improvements several times. We believe Meta's failure to properly manage the content on its platform creates significant reputational, regulatory, legal, and financial risks.

Unfortunately, Meta's management and Oversight Board has repeatedly failed to properly enforce its content management policies and the board of directors has failed to provide adequate oversight, resulting in serial controversies and risks for investors. As a result, the New York State Common Retirement Fund will be voting against all of Meta's directors at its annual meeting on May 25, 2022. Additionally, we will support the shareholder proposal on the proxy seeking a report on the enforcement of its community standards and will encourage other investors to do likewise.

The proliferation of harmful content on Meta's platform not only leads to risks for investors but—more importantly and tragically—impacts real world events with devastating effects. Until Meta's board of directors can demonstrate its ability to successfully oversee the company's content management policies, the Fund will continue voting against directors.

Sincerely,

Thomas P. DiNapoli
